Welcome by Yves Léon, Induction Officer

Chères Consœurs et Confrères,

It is my great pleasure, on behalf of Bailli Délégué Siebe Stellingwerff Beintema, to invite you to the Grand Chapitre taking place from 7 to 9 June 2024.

The board of the Dutch Bailliage has worked diligently to put together a unique programme in the central part of the Netherlands, namely North Brabant and Utrecht.

We think it would be great to explore this beautiful area, with many highly regarded restaurants, in the company of our Chaîne friends, and to meet new members of the Chaîne family.

Personally, I am very honoured to have been asked by the board to represent our President Yam Atallah as induction officer, as it has been 27 years since I immigrated to Turkey from the Netherlands, and the Netherlands always remains your homeland, no matter how long you are away from it.

Hence, my wife Nurcan and I are greatly looking forward to enjoying three unforgettable days together.

Vive la Chaîne!

Yves Léon

Bailli Délégué de Turquie
Membre du Conseil Magistral

Welcome to the Heart of The Netherlands!

During the two previous Grand Chapitres, we introduced participants to the north and east of our country. In 2018, we visited the provinces of Groningen, Friesland and Drenthe. Then, due to the corona pandemic, another Grand Chapitre could not take place until 2022, with Overijssel and Gelderland showing us their culinary and cultural faces.

Now the choice has been made to visit the centre of the Netherlands. Thus, in successive years, we give extra attention to restaurants of our professional members each time.

The Grand Chapitre 2024 of the Dutch Bailliage will take place from Hotel De Ruwenberg in Sint-Michielsgestel, a historic town under the smoke of 's-Hertogenbosch. From there, we will get to know the area and get to know each other better, reminisce and enjoy fine meals and inspiring visits.

Hotel

Hotel de Ruwenberg was chosen as the starting point. This is where the intronisation ceremony and gala dinner will take place. The hotel has sufficient, pleasantly priced rooms and other facilities to meet all our needs.

History of De Ruwenberg - The precise date

The castle "De Ruwenberg" dates back to the 14th century and has provided a peaceful haven for knowledge seekers for many centuries. The exact date of origin is unknown, but the dial of the preserved clockwork bears the year 1337.

Twice, the Ruwenberg has escaped disaster. The first time in 1866, a fierce fire raged in the attic, which fortunately could be extinguished in time. In 1911, a large expansion plan was drawn up to demolish the 'old' part of the Ruwenberg entirely. The time had come in 1940, but World War II broke out. After the war, the expansion plans were found to be quite outdated, and in 1968 the municipal council pointed out that the brick tower was listed as a historic building and could therefore not be demolished. Thus, at the last minute, the building was spared after all.

An extraordinary castle on the Dommel

The castle, a noble residence where it is good to stay, has changed hands several times. For instance, the van Thuyt family owned it during the period from 1375 to 1455 and the lords of Ravenschoot from 1527 to 1655.

During the Dutch War, which broke out in 1672, the Ruwenberg chapel was mainly used privately. In 1834, Mrg. den Dubbelen settled on the Ruwenberg acquired by the church. A garden house, ponds and a flower garden were created. The castle then consists downstairs of two rooms, a reception room, a kitchen and a pantry. Upstairs there are six bedrooms and behind the tower a start to the construction of a chapel.

From castle to conference centre

In the year 1852, His Serene Highness Johannes Zwijsen, Bishop of Gerra and Apostolic Vicar of 's-Hertogenbosch, founded the boarding school "Huize Ruwenberg".

The main purpose of this institute was to prepare young people over seven and under twelve years of age for the study of Humanities at the Seminary, through religious education and instruction in Dutch and French. From 6 October 1852, the first pupils arrived. There were 61 of them, four from Gelderland and 57 from North Brabant. One could later observe with satisfaction what a high flight the Institute "Huize Ruwenberg" had taken.

It was known and recognised throughout the country and even far beyond. Its numerous former students could and can be found in all church and state circles. And all in gratitude to the Venerable Brothers, whose merits as teachers and educators are not lightly overrated.

From 1965, no new students were accepted for the boarding school and in 1989, the grounds were sold by the Brothers. The boarding school buildings were demolished and a conference centre was established on the site, of which the remains of the castle form an integral part. To this day, De Ruwenberg is the location for business meetings and events combined with overnight accommodation on an inspiring 14ha estate.

The Dutch provinces of North Brabant and Utrecht are worth a visit

Central Netherlands, the heart of our country welcomes us!

The Grand Chapitre 2024 offers a unique opportunity to learn about the landscape and culinary highlights of this area.

North-Brabant

History of Brabant

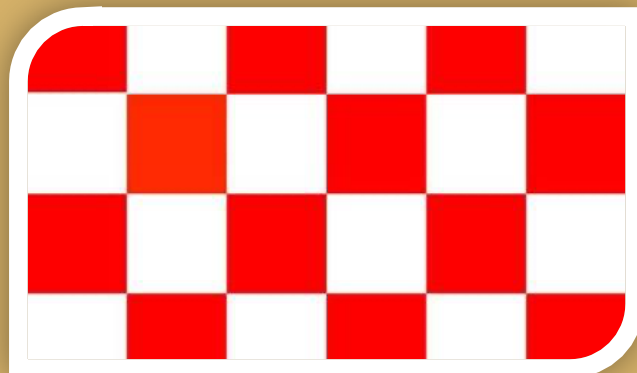

Brabant was originally the name of a Carolingian fold county stretching between the Scheldt and the Dijle, now rivers in Belgium. Later, the Duchy of Brabant was formed. Roughly speaking, this covered the present-day provinces of North Brabant, Antwerp (B) and Flemish Brabant (B).

1648: State of Brabant

After the signing of the Union of Utrecht in 1579, Brabant became the subject of combat. Contestants were the Protestant Republic of the Seven United Netherlands and Catholic Spain, which occupied the Southern Netherlands. With the Peace of Munster in 1648, the northern part of Brabant became part of the Republic. This was then referred to as State of Brabant.

1795: Batavian Brabant

In 1795, the Republic of the Seven United Netherlands became the Batavian Republic. In it, Catholics were recognised as equal citizens and State Brabant became a province named Batavian Brabant.

1813: North-Brabant

Batavian Brabant ceased to exist during French rule, when the area was divided into several departments. At the Congress of Vienna, it was decided that a number of territories - including the Austrian Netherlands and the former Batavian Republic - would be merged into the United Kingdom of the Netherlands. The whole area of the former Duchy of Brabant was now reunited into one state and divided into three provinces: North Brabant, Antwerp and South Brabant (with Brussels and Leuven).

The provincial flag (also called Brabants Bont) is constructed according to a chessboard pattern and has 24 squares alternating in red and white.

The Brabant flag dates back to the Middle Ages. Since then, mainly ships have hoisted the red and white, especially in Antwerp. For some reason, the chequered pattern fell into disuse in the 18th century, until state archivist Mr J. Smit rescued the flag from oblivion. Thanks in part to him, the flag was inaugurated as the flag of the province of North Brabant in 1959. Provincial Councils thus decided on 21 January of that year.

Incidentally, the province of Antwerp also still has a chequered flag. On this, red and white alternate with blue and yellow.

The coat of arms

The Brabant lion was used as early as the 12th century and has been the coat of arms of the Duchy of Brabant for centuries.

After the secession of Belgium, the 'Brabants' on both sides of the border continued to use the lion as their coat of arms. But since 1920, two additional lions flank the North Brabant lion as shield bearers. After this adjustment, the province's coat of arms has not changed again.

Utrecht Province

Utrecht is a province to be proud of. Varied, vibrant and with a rich history. With a wide variety of lifestyles, cultures and personal preferences.

A province with a beautiful landscape, diversity of towns and villages and plenty of cultural heritage.

The province of Utrecht covers about 1560 square kilometres, has 26 municipalities with a combined population of about 1.36 million. The area has a rich history; from Roman settlement via the bishopric of Utrecht to today's young knowledge culture.

A unique combination of urban living and nature. The province has a unique combination of urban living and nature. Utrecht is a green province, but its road network is the busiest and most used road network in the Netherlands. Utrecht central station handles as many travellers as Schiphol Airport: 57 million a year. This needs policy, and this policy comes from the province, among others. They do this together with involved municipalities, the state and key partners; the province has a pioneering role in this.

The coat of arms of the province of Utrecht

The coat of arms of the province of Utrecht arose gradually. It is a combination of the arms of the Sticht Utrecht (first and fourth quarters), county of Holland (second and third quarters) and, as the heart shield, the coat of arms of the provincial capital Utrecht.

The silver cross on red background as the coat of arms for the Sticht Utrecht first appears in 1291 on the seal of bishop Jan van Sierck. The combination with the Dutch coat of arms is a consequence of the duchy of Burgundy's attempts to bring the Sticht under its influence. In 1528, a new coat of arms was designed for the province of Utrecht. Since power was exercised by Emperor Charles V as count of Holland, the coat of arms of the Sticht was included as a breastplate on the Dutch lion. This remained so until 1578, after which different arms appear, with the three main elements being the Sticht cross, the Dutch lion and the Utrecht city arms

The flag of the province of Utrecht

The flag is a combination of two other flags: the white-red bicolour of the Archdiocese of Utrecht and a white cross in a red field of the Sticht Utrecht.

In the approximately first 15 years after World War II, the Dutch provinces started adopting their own flags. Earlier, in 1938, a flag was used to symbolise the province; this was in honour of Queen Wilhelmina's 40th anniversary of reign. This flag was a horizontal red-white-and-yellow tricolour and had no official status. Flags specially designed for the occasion were used for the parade in Amsterdam.

In 1951, the province was advised by the High Council of Nobility to adopt its own flag. The current flag was subsequently adopted on 15 January 1952. The Utrecht provincial flag enjoys little to no popularity.

City Walk

Led by a guide, we see the most beautiful spots of the historic city centre.

's-Hertogenbosch is one of the oldest cities in the Netherlands. Here you will find beautiful houses, cosy streets, fortifications, lots of cafés and nice shops. The city guides of 's-Hertogenbosch take you on a walk full of surprises. You will pass historical buildings such as the Town Hall on Markt, the Zwanenbroedershuis in Hinthamerstraat and the imposing Sint-Jan. But besides these famous highlights, the guides also know the city's most beautiful streets and cosy squares.

Historical sailing route on the Binnendieze

This sailing route takes you back to the Middle Ages, the time when our city was a flourishing center of trade and art. The route starts in the Molenstraat and you go under the city in a whisper boat. On board this whisper boat you can see with your own eyes how old houses and sturdy city walls bear witness to the special history of our city.

History of the Binnendieze

The Binnendieze used to flow behind the houses. The current shape of the city, the streets and the narrow houses that border the water at the back, is therefore unique! Ships transported their goods over the narrow waterways, the iron and cloth industry used the water in the production process. The Binnendieze not only provided drinking water for the citizens, but the stream was also used as a sewer.

12:30 LUNCH IN HOTEL CENTRAL

The living room of 's-Hertogenbosch

If you want to know what hospitality feels like, go to Golden Tulip Hotel Central. Delivering a warm welcome may not have been invented here, but it is deeply rooted in their DNA. And we mean that most burgundian form of hospitality. In the best Brabant tradition. Like the hotel family of 's-Hertogenbosch that has been celebrating here for four generations. And like the first inhabitants of this historic place celebrated it more than 600 years ago.

We enjoy a four-course lunch.

11:00 uur VISIT HUIS DOORN – PLACE OF EXILE OF THE LAST GERMAN EMPEROR [Guides will show us around]

Huis Doorn: Imperial country house

Museum Huis Doorn is the former place of exile of the last German emperor Wilhelm II. After the German defeat in World War I, he fled to the neutral Netherlands in 1918. In 1920, Wilhelm II bought Huis Doorn, where he lived until his death in 1941.

European Court Culture

The interior of the House is still original and, together with the art collection, it gives a fine picture of European court culture. In the three-storey House, 18 beautifully decorated rooms are open to the public.

Largest Collection of German Art

64 Railway Carriages

Huis Doorn's furnishings come from palaces in Berlin and Potsdam. Wilhelm II filled Huis Doorn with the contents of 64 railway carriages from Germany. Magnificent furniture, paintings, silver objects and tapestries enabled the lord of the manor to continue living up to his standards in his small palace.

Pocket Size Court Protocol

The interior is still completely intact and offers the visitor an authentic picture of international royal living. Enter a setting of European allure and centuries of German royal history. And imagine how a pocket-sized court protocol played out daily in the small village of Doorn.

Huis Doorn houses the largest collection of German art and applied art outside Germany: there are over 30,000 objects. Some of these are on display at Huis Doorn, while others are in storage. The huge collection includes lots of silver and porcelain, paintings and furniture from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and shows you the different stages of the Baroque era.

Aversity to modern art

Wilhelm had distinct tastes. He detested modern art. Instead, he loved the Baroque art of his ancestors, such as Frederick the Great.

12:30 Departure for Leersum

13:30 FAREWELL LUNCH AT RESTAURANT VOLTAIRE* OP LANDGOED
PARC BROEKHUIZEN

Culinary Estate Parc Broekhuizen is an oasis in the middle of the Utrechtse Heuvelrug. The estate is the place where heritage, modern design and gastronomy come together.

Restaurant Voltaire is located in the beautiful monumental Main House. Upon entering, we walk through the kitchen to our tables. From the restaurant we have a breathtaking view of the estate and the terrace, where we can also take a seat in the summer. We are culinarily surprised with a four-course lunch prepared by chef Arturo Dalhuisen.
